The study identified a number of archaeological zones. These comprised the area to the south of Shepards Shore/Baltic Farm where there appeared to be some potential for the subsurface remains of Bronze Age round barrows. Further remains of the Wandsyke may also lay in this area. The majority of the site lay within land which had high potential for the recovery of material from the Civil War Battle of Roundway. An assessment was carried out in advance of proposed extensions to the council offices. Archaeological potential for the site was high, as it was located within the medieval extent of the town. It was thought that in theory archaeological remains from the Palaeolithic may be encountered, although modern development was expected to have severely truncated many remains. The proximity of the Rampart, the Scheduled Ancient Monument of the Saxon cemetery that lay within the study area and Grade II* Listed Building also needed to be considered. [Au(adp)]

An assessment was carried out in advance of the demolition of the orangery at the site and the construction of new buildings. Earthworks had been plotted as being located in the garden, however it was thought that this was erroneous. There was thought to be little evidence of archaeological remains predating the Grade I Listed manor. [Au(adp)]

An assessment was carried out to appraise the impact of service improvements in the study area. The conclusion was that any works would be no more destructive than grave digging at the site. Suggestions for mitigation included excavation and the reintering of human remains. [Au(abr)]

An assessment was carried out in advance of proposed redevelopment. The site had been quarried for sand and gravel, truncating archaeological remains and offering a low potential for the discovery of archaeology. A watching brief was recommended. [Au(abr)]

An assessment in advance of a housing development identified the overall archaeological potential of the site as low. A number of Listed Buildings associated with the wool trade and textile industry were located to the north of the site. However, it was pointed out that lack of find spots and features may have been indicative of a lack of investigation. [Au(abr)]
