A total of 32 sites of archaeological interest were identified. They all appeared to be post-medieval in date. Only one would be directly affected by the proposed new service reservoir. This was Sudell Nook, a farmstead dating back to at least 1779. [Au(abr)]

The desk-based study demonstrated finds of prehistoric lithics within the environs of the proposed turbines and that there was the potential for further finds associated with a ridge running along the northern side of the site. A walk-over survey found further post-medieval boundaries and drains and a building platform on the western edge of the site. [Au(abr)]
