GREEN ISLAND, POOLE HARBOUR

Green Island, Poole Harbour, Dorset. An Archaeological Evaluation and an Assessment of the Results

Work undertaken by: Wessex Archaeology

A number of ditches, a hearth base, a later of burnt stone and charcoal and a possible buried land surface were excavated. There was evidence for industrial activity, specifically shale-working and iron smithing, in the late Iron Age and in the early Roman period. A small range of other items, such as a rotary quern, worked flint and iron nails may also have had an industrial purpose. [Au(abr)]
