Work undertaken by: Cotswold Archaeology

An evaluation was carried out at the site as part of an essential planning condition relating to clay quarrying. An undated gully, a ditch representing a former field boundary and a post-medieval stone filled feature were encountered. Extensive evidence of previous ridge and furrow cultivation was also identified. [Au(abr)]

Work undertaken by: Avon Archaeological Unit

Seven evaluation trenches revealed and extensive network of post-medieval water management features comprising a substantial stone-built culvert and numerous rubble-filled land drains, as well as other drainage trenches crossing the site. The site was notable for the marked lack of artefacts present. [Au(abr)]
