Work undertaken by: University of Leicester Archaeological Services

The assessment identified the site as being in an area of high archaeological potential. North of the development Flore's house, a building of 13th/14th century date stands. The assessment identified that extensions to this building may have in the past extended into the development area. There is evidence for a rare Anglo-Saxon grubenhaus to the west of the site and other features may be located to the south. [Au(abr)]

East Midlands Region

This report concerned an area of proposed quarrying west of Thistleton. It has confirmed that the area was of significant archaeological potential, with Neolithic, Iron Age, Roman and medieval archaeology recorded in the immediate vicinity. This would have implications for any further development of the site. [Au(adp)]

An Archaeological Desk-Based Assessment of the Impact of a Proposed Quarry Access Road at Thistleton, Rutland

Clarke, S Leicester : University of Leicester Archaeological Services, 2002, 20pp, figs, tabs, refs

Work undertaken by: University of Leicester Archaeological Services

The proposed construction of an access road to the quarry site was thought to be in an area of considerable archaeological potential. Neolithic, Bronze Age, Iron Age, Roman and medieval deposits have been recorded within the vicinity of the site. The road would cut through the Roman town, as well as a Bronze Age ring ditch.
