CHANTRY CLOSE, UXBRIDGE*A Cultural Heritage Desk-Based Assessment Chantry Close, Uxbridge*

Hemley, S Twickenham : AOC Archaeology Group, 2002, 26pp, figs, refs

Work undertaken by: AOC Archaeology Group

The report offers an appraisal of the archaeological implications of redevelopment of the area surrounding Chantry Close, Uxbridge. The area has produced evidence of prehistoric activity but there is no evidence for Roman activity and it is probable that medieval features would be related to field systems. Deposits associated with the Grand Union Canal may be encountered along the southern edge of the site. It is recommended that archaeological evaluation be conducted to determine the presence/absence of any archaeological remains. [Au(adp)]

ST MARY'S CHURCH, HILLINGDON*A Cultural Heritage Desk-Based Assessment for St. Mary's Church Harefield, Hillingdon*

Vaughan-Williams, A Twickenham : AOC Archaeology Group, 2002, 42pp, pls, figs, tabs, refs

A review of documentary, geological, archival and cartographic sources has indicated that the site is in an area known to have archaeological potential. Prehistoric flints and handaxes have been found around the site. Roman and Saxon evidence is sparse, but the area blossomed from the medieval period onwards. A number of different schemes are currently being considered, all of which will have varying impacts on potential archaeological remains. A single recommendation cannot be provided until a final decision is made. [Au(abr)]
