A review of documentary, geological, archival and cartographic sources has indicated that the site lies in an area known to have archaeological potential. 17 King Street is a Grade II listed building, dating to the late 18th century. Therefore, it is recommended that arrangements should be made for an appropriate level of archaeological monitoring during any ground works related to the development with a specific proviso for full archaeological excavation where required. A review of documentary, geological, archival and cartographic sources has indicated that the site lies in an area known to have archaeological potential. The site lies on river terraced gravels which have the potential to contain prehistoric remains. During the medieval and post-medieval period the site was near to a medieval Manor (later Richmond Palace) and adjacent to a 16th century friary. It is recommended that arrangement should be made for an appropriate level of archaeological monitoring during any ground works related to the development with a specific proviso for full archaeological excavation where required.
