117 HIGH STREET, RAINHAM

Archaeological Desk-Based Assessment. 117 High Street, Rainham, Kent

Hawkins, D London : CgMs, 2002, 27pp, figs, tabs, refs

Work undertaken by: CgMs

The site was thought to have little archaeological potential for the prehistoric period but good potential for the recovery of Roman remains, as well as those of the Saxon-medieval periods. Rainham was thought to be a royal estate centre at this time. It was believed that the site was occupied by a vicarage from at least the early twelfth century. This was present until the Second World War. There were variable post depositional impacts at the site, which may have affected preservation. An archaeological evaluation was recommended. [u(adp)]

LAND AT GRANGE FARM, GILLINGHAM

Archaeological Desk-Based Assessment of Land at Grange Farm, Gillingham, Kent

Hawkins, D London : CgMs, 2002, 36pp, colour pls, figs, refs

Work undertaken by: CgMs

The site was located in an area where archaeological remains could be expected to be encountered, particularly for the Neolithic to Roman periods. Medieval and post-medieval deposits were thought to vary by density around the area but these could also be expected to be recovered. [Au(abr)]
