Work undertaken by: Peak District National Park Authority Archaeology Service

An archaeological evaluation was carried out at 3 Corby Road Stanion close to an area known to have been the site of medieval kilns producing pottery during the 12th to 15th centuries AD. The evaluation comprised a brief documentary search followed by geophysical survey and sample trial trenching. The trial trenching revealed the remains of a small structure or structures close to the Corby Road together with the remains of medieval and later pits. No evidence for pottery production was found within the site area suggesting the main focus of activity was further to the north. [Au(abr)]

THE NORTH DEVON AREA OF OUTSTANDING NATURAL BEAUTY PHASE 1The North Devon Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Phase 1 Archaeological Survey Summary Report

Collings, AJ, Manning, PT & Valentin, J Exeter : Exeter Archaeology, 2006, 24pp, tabs, refs

Work undertaken by: Exeter Archaeology

A desk-based assessment was carried out as phase 1 of an archaeological survey at the North Devon Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Prior to the survey Devon Historic Environment Record had 1,710 entries within the area of the AONB. As a result of the present work a further 1279 sites can be added to the Devon HER. Some of these could be classed as new sites found as a direct result of this research, while others, such as those from the National Trust SMR, had not yet been submitted to the Devon HER. There were 29 Scheduled monuments within the area of the AONB. These included some of the coastal Iron Age promontory hillforts and hillslope enclosures and many of the extant Bronze Age barrows. There were 256 Listed structures recorded within the Devon HER. These were mostly designated Grade II (229) and comprised farmhouses, chapels, cottages, outbuildings, walls, limekilns and a mine tunnel at Combe Martin. Most of these buildings were of traditional construction and added enormously to the character of the area. There were 22 Grade II* buildings recorded. These included St. Nectan's holy well in Welcombe, many farmhouses, plasterwork at Brownsham in Hartland, St. Nectan's church in Welcome, Portledge House in Alwington, Watermouth Castle, the Church of St Sabinus at Woolacombe and the Pack of Cards Inn in at Combe Martin. Of particular interest were the six Grade I buildings, which comprised Hartland Abbey House and the parish churches at Hartland, Clovelly, Combe Martin, Georgeham and Morteohoe. Until the medieval period the area of the North

Devon AONB was likely to have been a sparsely settled largely rural area. Nevertheless, it did contain important evidence for archaeological activity, either below ground or as earthwork or structural evidence. In the course of this work various themes emerged which would inform and guide priorities for further survey work and interpretation. The survey did not identify areas of unimproved land, where the greater survival and quality of the archaeological resource might be anticipated. However, it was likely that the common lands of Bursdon Moor and Milford have not been subjected to modern intensive agricultural practices. The major woodland areas also had potential, in that good survival of earthworks, structures or industrial deposits could be expected. [Au(adp)]
