Monitoring and recording during service trenching along the northern edge of the nave revealed the remains of the Georgian external wall immediately below the existing floor level. A brick vault of contemporary date was attached to the lower wall face. Three lead coffins were recorded, one dated to 1813 with a plaque naming the individual within. The coffins were recorded and left in situ. The vault was filled with homogeneous 'grave soil', possibly derived from the churchyard of the medieval church. No further investigation of the vault was undertaken. [Au(abr)]
