127 Lawrence Street, York. Report on an Archaeological Excavation and Watching Brief

Evans, D York : York Archaeological Trust, 2002, 29pp, figs, tabs, refs

Work undertaken by: York Archaeological Trust

An excavation and watching brief were carried out as the third phase of a programme of investigation across the area. Pits, ditches, post holes and gullies were located, although some had been previously recorded. Dating evidence suggested that although the principal occupational activity at the site dated to the 11th-14th centuries, activity, mainly in the form of rubbish disposal, may have continued into the 16th century. A watching brief was carried out during the machine excavation of a number of test pits. Post-medieval and modern dump deposits were noted. A layer of cobbles and gravel was thought to have been part of the principal Roman Road in the area. A very thick deposit of post-medieval date was also located and thought to be the backfill of a large linear feature seen in a previous evaluation to the east of the site. [Au(abr)]

An archaeological watching brief and recording undertaken during the construction of a lift pit revealed well preserved deposits of medieval, Anglo-Scandinavian and Roman date. Finds, including a number of textile fragments, leather objects and a Frisian bone comb, were retrieved from a series of pits of Anglo-Scandinavian date. The pottery sequence included a considerable quantity of Roman material, much of it residual. Timber posts and wattle were also recovered. [Au(abr)]

Work undertaken by: York Archaeological Trust

A watching brief was carried out during various groundworks for the rebuilding of the former Stonegate Arcade. It was found that much of the development area had been disturbed by construction activity of the late 20th century. In the north-east part of the site a number of probable post-medieval dump and build-up deposits were recorded and at the extreme north-east a possible clay floor overlain by a burnt deposit was noted. This was interpreted as a post-medieval workshop. A nearby well was thought to indicate an open area. [Au(abr)]
