Geomagnetic survey was undertaken over three areas around the northern and eastern sides of the churchyard. The presence of ferrous litter has hindered the detection of possible archaeological features in some areas. The remains of a rectangular structure may have been detected in Area 1. A probable ferrous pipe has been detected in Area 2. An infilled trackway or ditch has been detected in Area 3. [Au(abr)]

A gradiometer survey was carried out on the site. The survey detected the presence of small ferrous items across the survey area. The presence of this ferrous litter does not appear to have hindered the detection of possible archaeological features, although none were identified. [Au(abr)]
